Before the accident occurred the "autogun" had demonstrated its ability to get over the road at a terrific pace—about thirty miles an hour. With bugle blowing and a flag flying, the self-propelling machine left the fastest wheelmen far behind the first few miles of its run.

No exact estimate can be made of the time it will take to reach Washington.

A few days of intense heat have done more to break down the established traditions of England than would a dozen reform bills. Long-established rules of state, social, business and political etiquette have been swept to the winds, or rather into the humidity which the lack of wind produces In a land where a few years ago sunstroke was almost unknown, the hospitals are now crowded with cases of that description For the first time in the history of parliament one of the front-bench members, Mr. Herbert Gladstone, has appeared at St. Stephen's wearing a straw hat, to the amazement of the members of the house. This latitude of dress extends also to servants. Bepowdered flunkeys thick with gold lace may be seen gravely sitting upon the boxes wearing sallor hats of varying pattern, and fashlonable nurses have given up the hot veil and bonnet in favor of light straw headgear. In brief, this metropolis of the world, with its countless arbitrary forms of dress and procedure, has, in the short space of a week, been turned topsy-turry and has become as free and easy as a Haltian village at the height of summer.

The serious phase of the matter is the rapidly increasing death rate and the prophesied continuation of the heat wave. The papers never tire of pointing out how utterly inadequate are the provisions to deal with the present conditions. Ice is a luxury obtainable by the richeolty, and by them in limited quantities. Touching Incidents of the War.

One of the most touching incidents of the war in South Africa occurred this week, when Capt. Towse received the first Victoria Cross bestowed by the queen for valor in the veldt. Capt. Towse earned the distinction by attempting to carry off Colone Downman, who had been wounded, under a hall of builets. He was unable to do so, and lay beside him and kept off the Boers all night till help came. By that time Colonel Downman was dead. Capt. Towse was blinded in both eyes by a bullet wound. On Wednesday Capt. Towse was taken to Windsor and led into the royal presence by his wife, where he knelt at the feet of his sovereign, who was so much overcome at the sight of the blind hero that her aged hands could scarce pin on the most prized of all British decorations. The queen's few words of simple praise of his Downman, who had been wounded, under most prized of all British decorations. If Mr. Astor had not deserted Americ there would be a great deal more sympathy for him in the blunder he made lately in telling an uninvited guest to leave his house. That he has become convinced of his error, aside from the hints said to have been conveyed by the Prince of Wales, and, of course, very loudly by everybody else afterward, only adds another laughable phase to the whole business. Perhaps the annoyance of the unlinvited or the applications of the would-be invited may have had something to do with Mr. Astor's desire to leave his country and try how it was in English society.

As an ambitious American trying to secure a social foothold he would naturally have to put up with all sorts of worries of this kind, to get a company together with the requisite number of titles in it, but as an Englishman he probably expected to get the treatment accorded one supposed to know the real thing from the false. In the long run he will probably gain by the incident, for the Astor money bags can shorten memories of untoward circumstances just as well in England as anywhere else—and it will be a whole year before another London season rolls around.

missed from the setting, and as its owner had been driving all over the city and the suburbs that day, to hunt for it seemed something like searching the traditional bale of hay for a needle.

The owner, however, did not resort to any useless efforts of that kind. She simply inserted a small advertisement in The Star and next morning a little black boy was at her house bright and early with the missing gem, which had attracted his eye in the gutter in front of a down-town store. "The casualties of the allies in the three days' fighting before the native city of Tien

They had been ordered to hold an important front, but on being charged by the Chinese with bayonets the entire detachment bolted, panic-stricken. "The Russians killed all the Chinese wounded, in revenge for the Pekin massacre."

ROBBED AN AMPUTATED LEG. Ghoulish Work of Two Lads at Johns-A special dispatch to the New York

World from Johnstown, Pa., says: Clare and Paul Hipler, brothers, who reside with their parents in Daleborough. ceny. When a Pennsylvania freight train ran into a crowd of excursionists at the depot a few days ago the left leg of Mrs. gained consciousness at the Memorial Hos-pital Mrs. Begley told the physicians that she had concealed $100 in the stocking on the leg that was cut off.

The leg after being cut off by the train lay on the station platform for a few minutes, which time was sufficient to allow the Hipier lads to turn the stocking inside out and procure the money. The clue that led to the arrest of the boys was furnished by their presence in the city spending money for livery hire and meals. After being locked up the lads told where the money was secreted, and $70 was found.

DEATH OF MRS. BRUCE,

DEATH OF MRS. BRUCE.

The announcement in yesterday's Star of the death of Mrs. J. Carl Bruce caused much surprise and grief to the many who had known and loved her. Mrs. Bruce was a young woman of lovely character, and her gentle, unobtrusive nature attracted to her many friends. Her intense love for little children was remarkable, and by them she was regarded as a happy comrade and a loving friend. She was a very successful kindergartner, and the parents of the children under her care considered themselves most fortunate in secoring her gentle guidance for their little ones. Her sweet influence in school and social life was known and appreciated by those who mourn her early death. In recalling to mind this beautiful young life one is reminded of the lines of Helne which begin:

"Thou art even as a flower is.

To those living in malarial districts Tutt's Pills are indispensable

"Thou art even as a flower is, So gentle and pure and fair."
